

Renunciation of a special partner's pension

Issue April 2022

Important to know

- Renunciation is only possible if your ex-partner is entitled to a special partner's pension.
- Does your ex-partner choose to renounce the special partner's pension?
Then your ex-partner can no longer go back on this decision.
- Nationale-Nederlanden does not act as a mediator between ex-partners. You and your ex-partner will therefore take care of the delivery and signing of this agreement yourself.
In order to protect the privacy of our customers, we do not provide address details.
- Only when Nationale-Nederlanden has agreed to your request, the distance is final.
You and your ex-partner will receive a message about this.
- Also read the appendix 'Renouncing a special partner's pension. What's involved?'
You will find this behind the agreement.

Renouncing a special partner's pension. What is involved?

What are the consequences of renouncing a special partner's pension?

If you separate, your ex-partner is entitled to the partner's pension that you have accrued until the end of the relationship. We call this 'special partner's pension'. Your ex-partner will receive the special partner's pension if you die. Your ex-partner can renounce this pension. You can arrange this with the 'Agreement for the waiver of a special partner's pension'. You both sign this agreement. After renunciation, the right to a special partner's pension expires and your ex-partner will not receive any benefit if you die. After distance, the partner's pension may become available for a subsequent partner. Do you not have a partner on your retirement date? Then you may be able to exchange the partner's pension for a higher old-age pension. You can read what applies to you in the pension regulations. For additional questions, please contact Nationale-Nederlanden.

Distance from a special partner's pension after the start of your old-age pension

Does your ex-partner renounce the special partner's pension after your old-age pension has started? Then keep the following in mind:

- Renouncing a special partner's pension does not give you a higher old-age pension.
- Did you get back into a relationship after the start of your old-age pension?
Then your new partner is not entitled to a partner's pension. Not even if your ex-partner waives (or has renounced) the special partner's pension.

How do you waive your partner's pension?

The Pensions Act offers ex-partners the possibility to renounce a special partner's pension. Has it been decided to renounce? Then this must be properly recorded in the separation covenant or in a separate waiver or agreement. It is important that it is literally described that your ex-partner waives the special partner's pension. Many agreements do not meet this requirement. That is why we ask you to make use of our agreement 'Distance special partner pension'.

Please note: only when Nationale-Nederlanden has agreed to your request, the distance is final. You will receive a message about this.
